

Galleries

Like the artists themselves, individual and unique art galleries often spring up - and thrive - in all corners of Chicago. The largest concentration of upscale galleries is in the River North section between Chicago and Grand Streets. The funky neighborhood galleries in the West Loop are a proving ground for up-and-coming artists, and draw a decidedly adventurous clientele. Denizens in search of the most avant-garde work often explore the underground galleries of Pilsen or Bucktown. Shown here, two men from the city's Perimeter Gallery hang pieces for The Art Chicago Show which exhibits work from over 100 artists.

▲ (AP Photo/Charles Rex Arbogast)

FAMOUS ARTISTS:

1 Bertha Palmer - When this art patron donated her definitive collection of impressionist paintings to the AIC, Chicago suddenly had its first world-class museum.

2 Walt Disney - Growing up in post-Columbian Expo Chicago, this animator learned a little about grandiose displays and dreamlike kingdoms.

3 Buckminster Fuller - This quirky inventor from the Institute of Design faculty gave us, among other things, the geodesic dome.

4 Archibald Motley, Jr. - Mixing his Creole roots with the flavors of Bronzeville Chicago, this African American painter cooked up a visual gumbo Chicagoans still love.

5 Lorado Taft - From his legendary Southside studios, he literally wrote the book on the History of American Sculpture - then added to it with five decades of heroic monuments.

▲ Top to Bottom:
Walt Disney (AP Photo),
Buckminster Fuller
(AP Photo),
Archibald Motley, Jr.
(Photo/Aynsley Floyd)